The Local Government Ombudsman's Annual Letter

Chester Le Street District Council for the year ended
31 March 2008

The Local Government Ombudsman (LGO) provides a free, independent and impartial service. We consider complaints about the administrative actions of councils and some other authorities. We cannot question what a council has done simply because someone does not agree with it. If we find something has gone wrong, such as poor service, service failure, delay or bad advice, and that a person has suffered as a result, the Ombudsmen aim to get it put right by recommending a suitable remedy. The LGO also uses the findings from investigation work to help authorities provide better public services through initiatives such as special reports, training and annual letters.

Annual Letter 2007/08 - Introduction

This annual letter provides a summary of the complaints received about [insert authority name] and comments on the authority's performance and complaint-handling arrangements.

As a result of Secretary of State's decisions on the future structure of local government in Durham this is the last Annual Letter that I shall be sending to the Council in its present form. I should like to take this opportunity of thanking all the members and officers who have dealt with my office for their courtesy and co-operation and wish you well for the future.

Two attachments form an integral part of this letter: statistical data covering a three year period and a note to help the interpretation of the statistics.

Complaints received

I received a total of 10 complaints against the Council in the last year, a slight drop from the 14 received in each of the two previous years. The numbers are too small to be regarded as significant but certainly no patterns emerged during the year to give rise to any concern for either the Council or me.

Liaison with the Local Government Ombudsman

I ask all councils to respond to enquiries from my office within 28 days. I am very pleased to note that, for the second consecutive year, the Council comfortably met that target. This year the Council responded to my office within 23 days. Working relations between our offices remain good.

Decisions on complaints

Reports and local settlements

We will often discontinue enquires into a complaint when a council takes or agrees to take action that we consider to be a satisfactory response – we call these local settlements. In 2007/08 the Local Government Ombudsmen determined 27% [this equates to a figure just short of 2,400 complaints nationally] of complaints by local settlement (excluding 'premature' complaints - where councils have not had a proper chance to deal with them - and those outside our jurisdiction). If an investigation is completed I issue a public report.

I issued no reports against the Council in the last year.

Other findings

I determined 14 complaints against the Council in the last year. Two of these complaints were sent to me prematurely by which I mean that the Council had not been given a reasonable opportunity to address the complaints before they were sent to me. Of the remaining complaints I found one to be outside of my jurisdiction while in 5 cases there was no evidence of maladministration by the Council and in 4 others I exercised my discretion not to pursue the matter. The Council agreed to settle the remaining two cases accepting readily that something had gone wrong, that the complainant had suffered and that a remedy was appropriate. The willingness of the Council to respond so positively in these situations is much appreciated.

Your Council's complaints procedure and handling of complaints

No issues have arisen during the year to suggest that there are any problems with the way in which the Council handles complaints made to it by the public.

Training in complaint handling

Although officers from the Council have, in the past, received training from us, perhaps I could remind you of our training activity.

Part of our role is to provide advice and guidance about good administrative practice. We offer training courses for all levels of local authority staff in complaints handling and investigation. A detailed evaluation of the training provided to councils over the past three years shows very high levels of satisfaction. We will customise courses to meet your Council's specific requirements and provide courses for groups of staff from different smaller authorities. Participants benefit from the complaint-handling knowledge and expertise of the experienced investigators who present the courses.

I enclose information on the full range of courses available together with contact details for enquiries and any further bookings.

LGO developments

We launched the LGO Advice Team in April, providing a first contact service for all enquirers and new complainants. Demand for the service has been high. Our team of advisers, trained to provide comprehensive information and advice, has dealt with many thousands of calls since the service started.

The team handles complaints submitted by telephone, email or text, as well as in writing. This new power to accept complaints other than in writing was one of the provisions of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act, which also came into force in April. Our experience of implementing other provisions in the Act, such as complaints about service failure and apparent maladministration, is being kept under review and will be subject to further discussion. Any feedback from your Council would be welcome.

Last year we published two special reports providing advice and guidance on 'applications for prior approval of telecommunications masts' and 'citizen redress in local partnerships'. Feedback on special reports is always welcome. I would particularly appreciate information on complaints protocols in the governance arrangements of partnerships with which your Council is involved.

Conclusions and general observations

I welcome this opportunity to comment on our experience of complaints about the Council over the past year. I hope that you find the information and assessment provided useful when seeking improvements to your Council's services.
