

The Local Government Ombudsman's Annual Letter Test Valley Borough Council

for the year ended 31 March 2007

The Local Government Ombudsman (LGO) investigates complaints by members of the public who consider that they have been caused injustice through administrative fault by local authorities and certain other bodies. The LGO also uses the findings from investigation work to help authorities provide better public services through initiatives such as special reports, training and annual letters.

Annual Letter 2006/07 - Introduction

The aim of the annual letter is to provide a summary of information on the complaints about your authority that we have received and try to draw any lessons learned about the authority's performance and complaint-handling arrangements. These might then be fed back into service improvement.

I hope that the letter will be a useful addition to other information your authority holds on how people experience or perceive your services.

There are two attachments which form an integral part of this letter: statistical data covering a three year period and a note to help the interpretation of the statistics.

Complaints received

Volume

We received nine complaints against your Council in 2006/07. That was considerably fewer than the 21 received the previous year and more in line with the figure for 2004/05. The decrease seems mainly to be due to a drop in the number of planning complaints. However it is normal for there to be some change from year to year and the overall level of complaints remains low, bearing in mind the number of decisions the Council makes on behalf of citizens every year.

Character

All but two of the complaints received last year were about planning matters. The dominance of planning complaints is typical for a borough council covering a rural area.

Decisions on complaints

Reports and local settlements

We use the term 'local settlement' to describe the outcome of a complaint where, during the course of our investigation, the Council takes, or agrees to take, some action which we consider is a satisfactory response to the complaint and the investigation does not need to be completed. These form a significant proportion of the complaints we determine. When we complete an investigation we must issue a report.

Last year there were no complaints against your Council that required a local settlement and nor did I have any need to issue a report against the Council. We made decisions on twelve complaints against your Council during 2006/07. Two of these were outside my jurisdiction and one was referred back to you because we considered the Council had not yet had an opportunity to deal with it. We found no maladministration in six cases and did not uphold the remaining three for other reasons. The complaints my office received raised no other particular issues.

Your Council's complaints procedure and handling of complaints

Only one of the nine complaints we received last year had not already been dealt with by the Council. This is well below the national average and indicates the Council's complaints procedure is working effectively. I note that your Council's website explains the complaints procedure and includes an online complaints form as well as contact details for my office.

Training in complaint handling

As part of our role to provide advice in good administrative practice, we offer training courses for all levels of local authority staff in complaints handling and investigation. The feedback from courses that have been delivered over the past two and a half years is very positive.

The range of courses is expanding in response to demand. We offer generic courses in Good Complaint Handing (identifying and processing complaints) and Effective Complaint Handling (investigation and resolution). We can run open courses for groups of staff from smaller authorities and also customise courses to meet your Council's specific requirements.

All courses are presented by an experienced investigator so participants benefit from their knowledge and expertise of complaint handling.

I have enclosed some information on the full range of courses available together with contact details for enquiries and any further bookings.

Liaison with the Local Government Ombudsman

My office made enquiries of your Council on two complaints last year. Your average response time was 21 days and continues to be well within the 28 days in which we ask councils to respond. I am most grateful for the co-operation your Council continues to show.

LGO developments

I thought it would be helpful to update you on a project we are implementing to improve the first contact that people have with us as part of our customer focus initiative. We are developing a new Access and Advice Service that will provide a gateway to our services for all complainants and enquirers. It will be mainly telephone-based but will also deal with email, text and letter correspondence. As the project progresses we will keep you informed about developments and expected timescales.

Changes brought about by the Local Government Bill are also expected to impact on the way that we work and again we will keep you informed as relevant.

We have just issued a special report that draws on our experience of dealing with complaints about planning applications for phone masts considered under the prior approval system, which can be highly controversial. We recommend simple measures that councils can adopt to minimise the problems that can occur.

A further special report will be published in July focusing on the difficulties that can be encountered when complaints are received by local authorities about services delivered through a partnership. Local partnerships and citizen redress sets out our advice and guidance on how these problems can be overcome by adopting good governance arrangements that include an effective complaints protocol.

Conclusions and general observations

I welcome this opportunity to give you my reflections about the complaints my office has dealt with over the past year. I hope that you find the information and assessment provided useful when seeking improvements to your Council's services.
